

DISCUSSES LIMIT ON J. S. EXPORTS

Secretary Redfield Confers With President on "Trading With the Enemy."

DIFFERENT FROM EMBARGO

Secretary Redfield took up with President Wilson today the desirability of the part of the government of having power to limit exports from the United States as necessary might arise. The Secretary drew a distinction between "limiting exports" and "embargoes," the latter, he declared, being in no way considered by the government at this time.

Business men from all parts of the country have written to the Secretary of the Department of Commerce, since war with Germany was declared, inquiring what countries they might trade with, and as to the possibilities of a trading-with-the-enemy act.

The government at this time, Mr. Redfield declared today, while considering a policy on "trading with the enemy," was unlikely to impose a drastic act such as England has on such matters.

Limitation May Be Necessary.

The necessity might arise, according to Secretary Redfield, for the limitation or control of certain exports. For instance, it might be deemed expedient at some future time for the government to limit the export of tin plate to certain foreign countries, should the needs of our own canners demand the supplies which normally would go to these countries. This action would be in no sense an "embargo," the Secretary said, and might be done away with at any time.

The necessity for limiting exports, it is believed, would apply to all exports, as exigencies might arise, and would apply to all sorts of exports, and even might include foodstuffs.

Secretary Redfield expressed the opinion, however, that any limitation of the exportation of foodstuffs would be unwise at this time, and totally unnecessary. He pointed to the nation-wide endeavors in behalf of the extension of the crops of the land, notably those movements now being urged by Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture, and declared that such measures have shown that what they can do the government would hardly consider any "embargo" on foodstuffs.

GERMAN MINISTER WANTS ARGENTINA TO EXPLAIN

Demands to Know What Was Said in Note to United States Following War Declaration.

BUENOS AIRES, April 13.—The German minister has demanded an audience of President Irigoyen, and it is said that he will demand an explanation of the terms of the Argentine note to the United States issued after the declaration of a state of war between the United States and Germany.

The German minister yesterday afternoon conferred with the minister of foreign affairs, with the idea of learning the purport of the answer Argentina had made to the United States regarding its war declaration. The foreign minister informed the German diplomatic representative that the answer was couched in proper terms.

Suppression of Manifesto Demanded.

The suppression of the announced public manifesto, which he claimed affected the neutrality of Argentina, was demanded by the German minister, to whom the foreign minister replied that he was ignorant of the terms of this manifesto, but that he could reassure the German minister on the subject of the correct demeanor of the Argentine people. In any event, the foreign minister added, the authorities would see to the strict enforcement of all the established laws and regulations.

It is known that the government, replying to Brazil's notification of its rupture with Germany, will express its sympathy and appreciation of the circumstances which compelled Brazil to sever relations with Berlin. A dispatch from Cordoba reports a demonstration there in favor of Argentina joining Brazil in action against Germany. Enthusiastic crowds applauded orators who demanded that the republic support the allies, the chief of police and other officials taking part in the demonstration.

Purchasing Agents Offer Services.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 13.—The National Association of Purchasing Agents, through its president, E. L. McGraw of Pittsburgh, has telegraphed President Wilson offering its services to the government. The association is made up of purchasing agents for the most important railroads, industrial concerns and commercial organizations in the country.
